SPM381 CONSUMER BEHAVIOR IN SPORTS

SPONSORSHIP

WHAT IS SPONSORSHIP?

“The provision of assistance, either financially or in kind, to an activity by a commercial organization for the purpose of achieving commercial objectives” (Meenaghan, 1983).

“A cash and/or in-kind fee paid to a property (typically a sports, entertainment, non-profit event or organization) in return for access to the exploitable commercial potential associated with that property” (IEG Inc., 2012).

Sponsorships are also scrutinized for their ability to provide incentives for a company's workforce.

Examples range from American Express inviting 3,000 employees to a company-sponsored rock concert in Central Park to McDonald's having NBA and Olympic athletes visit stores and meet with its crews.

Hugo Boss, which sponsors the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, offers employees discounted tickets and subsidized trips to Guggenheim museums worldwide.

Your attitude toward Kellogg's:
(+) (+) (+) = (+)

Kellogg's dropped
Michael Phelps.

"I like Michael Phelps."

Before: You like Michael Phelps (+), and Phelps endorses Kellogg's (+). To keep the triangle balanced, you like Kellogg's too (+). (+) (+) (+) = (+)

The news: Your attitude toward Phelps turns negative (-). Because Phelps is still linked to Kellogg's (+), your attitude toward Kellogg's also turns negative (-). (-) (+) (-) = (+)

Kellogg's response: Kellogg's drops Phelps, so the Phelps-Kellogg's link becomes negative (-). Now you can like Kellogg's again (+). (-) (-) (+) = (+) — dropping the endorser protects the brand.

SPONSORSHIP VS. ENDORSEMENT

SPONSORSHIP VS. ENDORSEMENT

Endorsement

“any individual who enjoys public recognition and who uses this recognition on behalf of a consumer good by appearing with it in an advertisement” (McCracken, 1989, p. 310).

Meaning Transfer = Meanings of the celebrity are now the meanings of the product (e.g., personality, age, gender, lifestyle types, status, class, etc.).

Nike is a product that Tiger Woods used during his game/play, and the Nike golf clubs (now he's using TaylorMade) as well as other equipment (such as a ball, shoes, etc.) could impact his performance. On the other hand, Buick (automobile brand) and Rolex (watchmaker) are not products that influence or enhance his game performance. As a result, Nike is an example of endorsement, whereas Buick and Rolex are examples of sponsorship.
